Stand Up for the Children of Gaza!

A comedy evening in aid of the Palestine Trauma Centre's

Days of Joy project with ...

Mark Thomas

comedian, presenter, political satirist and journalist. Mark is widely recognised as one of the boldest and most uncompromising comedian. He engages in investigative journalism, human rights campaigns and activism - e.g. 'Walking the Wall'. He has worked with Palestinian comedians in the West Bank.

Imran Yusuf

Kenyan-born stand-up comedian who has appeared on various British radio and TV comedy shows. A languid, punchy, cheeky and utterly lovable comedian, who can seamlessly weave socio-political satire with heartfelt introspection.

Daphna Baram

researcher, teacher, university lecturer, public speaker; an author, writer, literary translator; a voice artist, performer and stand up comedian. She has many well reviewed appearances at Edinburgh and Brighton festivals. "Masterful" Bunbury Magazine. "Amazing" The Wee Review.

Jenan Younis

a surgeon by profession, she won the BBC New Voices competition for her skit on attending an Islamic event but disappointing her audience when they discovered she was neither Muslim nor Arab.

Ivor Dembina

London based Jewish comedian who uses the traditional flavour of Jewish humour to tackle tricky subjects. His most political show was a comic account of his visit to Israel and Palestine entitled 'This is Not a Subject for Comedy'.

Compere: Ian Saville

socialist magician, ventriloquist and comedian. Ian Saville has performed socialist magic on picket lines, at benefits, and at many labour movement events, conferences and meetings, to audiences all over the UK, and overseas.

The Days of Joy project is run by the Palestine Trauma Centre in Gaza by local mental health professionals, play workers and drama therapists.

These professionals go out each week into different refugee camps, schools and open spaces in the urban centres of Gaza and provide play, drama and sporting activities for children.
